CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our heartfelt thanks to many friends and neighbors for the kindly aid and sympathy during our recent bereavement, to the church, factory, lodge and other organizations, and to the Rev. E. B. Tetley for his words of comfort.

ASA KENISTON AND ALL HIS CHILDREN.

South Paris.

Mrs. Susie B. Keniston

Mrs. Susie B. Keniston, wife of Asa S. Keniston, passed away at her home on West street, South Paris, Me., Wednesday, June 11, 1920. Mrs. Keniston had been in poor health since the death of her daughter, Ida, in 1920. On June 11 she was taken, in the arms of her daughter, to her home, where hands could do had been done to make her as comfortable as possible. Mrs. Keniston was a kind neighbor, a loving wife and mother. She would like to make the home happy for her loved ones.

Mrs. Keniston was the daughter of Ellis and Mehitabel (McAllister) McKean and was born in South Paris, Me., in 1866. She was the mother of ten children, two died in infancy, Villa of Bel-ter's Mills; Hazel of East Stoneham; Silas of South Paris; Edna of South Paris; Elmer of Exeter, N. H.; Glenn and Sarah of South Paris. There are 17 grandchildren, two great grandchildren. Besides her mother, she is survived by five brothers and three sisters to mourn their loss.

The funeral was held at the home, Friday, June 11, at 10 o'clock, by Rev. E. B. Tetley, and burial at the Hillside Cemetery at East Stoneham.

Pinned Under Gasoline Truck

M. F. Charles of South Paris is making good recovery from severe injuries sustained when he was pinned under a truck, which he was driving for A. W. Walker & Son, tipped over, pinning him down in the cab.

The accident occurred, Thursday morning on the steep grade beyond Paris Hill. The brakes failed to mesh and while trying to guide the heavy truck into a crossing street, it started to slide. The driver, M. F. Charles, was thrown out of the truck. The machine ran up over a bank, struck a rock and overturned.

Alan C. Miller was the first to reach the truck. Two men were crewed to remove some of the McCormick road working men out away the cab, and released the victim after an hour's work. In the meantime, Dr. William H. Standish, of Orléans, administered opiates to relieve suffering during the imprisonment.

Mr. Charles was taken to Dr. Stewart's hospital, where he is now recovering. The hand, the left shoulder was badly bruised and indented, besides lacerations of the arms and body. There was also some bruising of the flesh from gasoline, and much suffering from the shock.

The truck was not damaged except for a part of the cab that was damaged to release the driver.

Church Services During Vacation

During the services in the several churches are more or less broken up during vacation, the plan is to hold union meetings every Sunday morning during August.

At the Methodist church, the services will be held August 1, with services at the Methodist church, also at the same place on August 8. Services August 15 at the Baptist church, and August 22 at the Baptist church, and August 29, at the Congregational.

PARIS ROAD FACTORY

The Joseph McCormick Co. of East Providence, R. I., has secured the rights of contractors in the New England states, after having installed at Snow's Falls, five miles north of South Paris, one of the largest and most modern road building plants known. The Erie Aggre Meter Plant represents the most modern and efficient means of handling aggregate. They measure, weigh, dump, and deliver the material with accuracy, either by volume or weight measures, and assure contractors full sized batches, fills measures and loads a better job than can be done by any other method. "Rock crusher built by The Good Road Machinery Co. Inc. at Marthon N. Y. plant, A. J. Hinds of Watertown, Mass., and Dr. J. H. Hinds of Watertown, Mass. are in charge of installation for The Good Roads Machinery Co.

The McCormicks have three of the best road building plants in the country, and are best on hard work— from 100 to 200 tons.

Two Monarch Steam Road Rollers made by the Good Road Machinery Co. of Watertown, Mass. are in charge of installation for The Good Road Machinery Co.

Three compressed Air drilling machines of modern make at work at Snow Falls.

There are some fifteen teams with "Watson" dump wagons owned by McCormick.

The new Tinkon-equipped Multi-Fuel McCormick road rollers are in charge of the work. The highest standards of engineering are represented by the complete modern motor car. The new 27 E. is a bag paved machine, and is the only one in the world in an oil-tight dust-proof housing.

You will notice many "Gasco" and "Mack" trucks, noted for durability and speed, and many "Tinkon" trucks, which are James McCormick, and he knows who is best for Highway Construction.

Rev. S. T. Achenbach of Bethel will preach next Lord's Day in the South Paris Congregational Church at 10:45 a. m., and at 7:30 p. m. His theme for the morning will be, "God's Favor in the Cloud"; evening subject, "What I saw by the Sea."

The Church Vacation School opened Monday morning with 132 pupils on an anxious to work and play according to the program. The teachers, Misses and assistants are carrying forward the work successfully.

A dancing carnival is being arranged for the evening of August 27, at the Post American League for three nights of the fair, Sept. 21-23-25. Association Hall has been engaged for the big dance.

Many from this vicinity attended a dance at North Level, Thursday night where a large crowd gathered for the first time. The dance was a success. The boys and girls were hooked there again on July 29.

Actual construction has started Park Street bridge after a number of weeks delay. The contractors are being driven on the east side by foundation for the abutment. A Coffman dam and pump keep the immediate area of the bridge dry. The work will be the next construction after the river will be turned away from the west abutment and the foundation completed.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Herrick, George Penley and Ashley Bean are home from an automobile trip of two weeks to the Adirondack Park, and the Adirondack of New York, Vermont and New Hampshire. A complete camping outfit was carried and the party settled down a night or so in a fine camp, where they were very comfortable. The trip was very successful, they returned about the middle of the week. A sail on the St. Lawrence river, among the Adirondack mountains, was a very successful trip. At Seneca Lake the party visited "Watkins Glen" and put in the days at Lake George. A inspecting old forts and riding across Lake Champlain to Grand Isle was a novel experience.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Emery of Mexico, N. H., and Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Woodbury have returned from an automobile trip to Oostook County and New Brunswick.

OXFORD COUNTY UNITED PARISH

Doings in North Waterford, East Stoneham, Lovell, North Lovell, Albany.

These are busy days in the Oxford County United Parish. There may be some days when there is nothing special going on, but they are hard to find. Last week there was a very good social.

There was a Circle Supper and Social at North Waterford. Wednesday evening was given to the musical interests, with a choir rehearsal at East Stoneham in the afternoon and with another at North Waterford in the evening. Thursday evening there was a Circle at East Stoneham. That evening also the Staff were all present at a meeting at the village hall.

The meeting was to consider what might be done there to organize some religious activity. The meeting was addressed by Mrs. Ives, Sup't. Bliss, of the Congregational Conference, and Supt. Hedges, of the Methodist Conference, by Rev. Mr. Wilde, of Fryeburg, and several others. A Committee was appointed to consider the matter and prepare a report to the parish which will be organized in that section, with close cooperation with the United Parish.

Friday was the last day of the Vacation School at the First. The teachers and scholars all enjoyed a picnic in the afternoon. Then in the evening the scene of activity shifted to North Lovell, where the whole village turned out for a social. We have been told that it was a great time. It was featured by Miss Hallie McKee's account of her trip to the Sesqui-Centennial at Philadelphia, as one of the representative school girls of the country; nor should we neglect to mention the refreshments that were served by the North Lovell folks. Well, it was a great time and there are some who hope to go again.

Sunday the usual services were held, and they continued last night to the discussion at the Young People's meeting at North Waterford continued warm until almost 10:00 P. M. That is something in the Parish that all of the young people should attend. They are well worth while.

Then on Tuesday a "peppy" sort of a social was held at the Grange Hall at S. Waterford. The crowd was small, in fact it hardly could be called a crowd, but the enjoyment of the evening was in inverse ratio to the number present, and in direct ratio to the warmth of the evening. The heat, however, did not seem to quench any of our enthusiasm or liveliness of the games.

On Wednesday, the Church Vacation School for the upper end of the Parish opens at Albany. We hope the attendance will be large, for some of the boys and girls should miss such an opportunity.

Chautauque program opens at Waterford Flat, Saturday. Everybody ought to be there and support such an enterprise that brings so much good to a community.

Sunday School Lesson

Lesson for July 25

THE PASSOVER

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 12:1-10. GOLDEN TEXT—Christ, our Passover, is sacrificed for us. PRIMARY TOPIC—The Story of a Feast.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The First Passover Feast. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—A Memorial Feast. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Meaning of the Passover.

I. The Passover Instituted (vv. 1-11).

1. The date (v. 2). With the institution of the passover came a change in the order of time. The common year, rolling on as usual, but with reference to God's chosen people the order was interrupted, and everything was made to date from this event.

2. The lamb set apart (vv. 3-5). This lamb must be a male without blemish, indicating that it must be both representative and perfect.

3. The lamb was killed by the whole congregation (v. 6).

This shows that it was not for the individual only, but for the entire assembly. The setting apart of the lamb was not sufficient. It must be killed, for "without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins."

4. The blood of the slain lamb was to be placed upon the side posts and lintels of the door (v. 7). When the destroying angel passed through the land he passed over the houses where the door posts were sprinkled with blood (v. 28). This blood was the evidence that a substitute had been offered for them.

5. Angel feeding upon the lamb (vv. 8-10).

This denotes fellowship. The lamb roasted signified the atonement of fire in God's judgment at the cross. The head, the legs and pendants thereof show that in the substitutionary sacrifice the understanding, the will, and all that pertains thereto were involved. This shows that the atonement of Jesus Christ involved His obedience to law as well as His suffering in the stead of His own. The eating of unleavened bread signifies that no sin is connected with or allowed in fellowship with Christ. Leaven signifies corruption (1 Cor. 5:7-8). The Israelites did not put away leaven to be saved from the destroying angel, but being saved because under the shadow of the blood they put away leaven, that is, evil, in order to have fellowship with their Redeemer. The bitter herbs connected with this feast suggest the bitterness of Christ's suffering.

6. They ate the passover ready for action (v. 11).

Their loins were girded, their shoes were on their feet, and a staff in hand. The girding of the loins betokened separation from sin, and preparation and readiness for service. The feet being shod indicated their willingness and readiness to march out of Egypt. The staff in hand and their nature as pilgrims leaning upon a support outside of themselves. They were to leave behind them the place of death and darkness and march to the promised land.

7. The unclean denied participation in the feast (vv. 42-43).

The unclean was typical of regeneration. The significance of the requirement is that only those who have become new creatures by the power of the Cross have a right to sit at the passover feast.

8. The Significance of the Passover (vv. 24-25).

It was a memorial institution, calling to mind the deliverance of the Israelites from Egyptian bondage. This was to be taught to their children from generation to generation when they came into the land.

9. The Awful Judgment (vv. 26-28).

At midnight the Lord smote all the first-born in the land from the first-born of Pharaoh that sat on his throne unto the first-born of the captive that was in bondage, and all the first-born of cattle. There was death that night in every home throughout Egypt where the blood was not found. A great and awful cry went up from the Egyptians for there was not a house where there was not one dead.

10. The Great Deliverance (vv. 31-32).

So mighty was this stroke that Pharaoh called for Moses in the night and requested him to be gone with his flocks and herds. The Israelites hastily made ready for their journey. They demanded of the Egyptians jewels of silver and gold and raiment. The word "borrow" in verse 35 means "demand." Instead of the sense in which we use it today.

BETHEL MAN IS SEEKING A PARDON

Pardon for pardon was filed at the office of the Secretary of State, Friday, by Leander Thurlow of Bethel, who is serving a life term in the State Prison at Thomaston for murder, having been convicted in the May, 1924 term of the Supreme Judicial Court for Oxford County. Hearing will be assigned on this matter at the next session of the Governor and Council.

The petition seeks executive clemency for the reason as he alleges that he is not guilty of the crime of murder for which he was sentenced.

The Canal That Was

With all these aids and from individual subscriptions and loans, construction was begun in 1826 and completed in 1830 at an expense of $60,000, which greatly exceeded the engineer's estimate. The most extra expenses the company was obliged to borrow from the Canal Bank as early as 1829, mortgaging its property. This mortgage was followed by others so the enterprise began under a financial handicap of $75,500.

Starting from Harrison Village the canal boats sailed down Long Lake into and across Brandy Pond to the Songo River, where they entered the first lock. They were pulled through the twisting turns of the Songo, into Sebago, and again hoisted sails which carried them across the big lake to White's Bridge at the entrance of the Basin in Windham.

Lowering sails and unshipping masts they passed under this, then setting their canvas again, completed in a half mile their lake journey, arrived at the head of the Basin or Sebago Falls at the head of the Basin or Sebago Falls.

Here they entered the first lock, which brought them into the canal and the Presumpscot River. The former simply followed the course of the river to the carapapa, now Westbrook. There river and canal parted company. The river kept on to the sea; the canal took a straight line, and unshipping masts they passed under this, then setting their canvas again, completed in a half mile their lake journey, arrived at the head of the Basin or Sebago Falls at the head of the Basin or Sebago Falls.

All through the canal there was a width of thirty feet at the surface and ten feet at the bottom, with an average depth of about four feet. From Harrison Village to the entrance of the canal at the Basin was approximately thirty miles. From the Basin to Portland was twenty more miles. The canal really made about fifty miles of navigable water and played a great part in developing the surrounding country.

The towpath was of sufficient width to allow horses towing meeting boats to pass easily. Sebago is 280 feet above the route adopted, made it necessary to construct twenty-seven locks. These were eighty feet long and ten feet wide. The sides were massively constructed of stone masonry with wooden gates at either end operated by balance beams.

The boats themselves were of clumsy design. When the prosperity of the canal was at its height there were 150 of them all told. They were from fifty to sixty feet long and ten or twelve feet wide. They were blunt of bow, square of stern, flat of bottom, and equipped with big centre-boards which were lowered when sailing against the wind. Sails were rigged on two masts, set in laws and hung on iron pins at the deck. They could be unshipped by folding back when passing under bridges.

At Half-Cent a Mile The first boat through the canal was the George Washington, intended as a passenger craft, fully furnished and equipped with a bar, but owing to the fact that liquor was sold at a dozen places along the canal, while the George Washington could be in but one place at a time, the patronage of the thirty-mile canal came up to anticipations. Neither did passenger traffic show its appreciation. Natives wishing to go to Portland took the first boat that came along or arranged to go with some skipper who might be a personal friend. So the George Washington soon joined the procession of prosaic freighters.

Mills sprang up along the lakes. Lumber, shuck, cordwood, hoops and farm products were "canal boated" to Portland, while groceries, furniture and general merchandise were included in the return cargoes. Toll rates were figured on so much a mile—apples, three miles for each barrel; powder, a ton a mile. Masts and spars were seven dollars a load flat, wood for fuel, two to three cents a mile per cord.

There was a special tariff on "spigots" the loss of a cask from one of the boats is said to have been responsible for naming Brandy Pond. Passengers paid half a cent a mile with no reduction for children, which could hardly be considered excessive. Small cabins were capable of sheltering half a dozen people and the crew of three men slept there unless it was warm enough to stretch out on deck. Boats were not allowed to move more than four miles an hour and were required to blow a long blast on a whistle when approaching a lock. Every lock required a man to tend it.

Working His Way to Sebago There are still a few men alive who remember when the old canal was in its heyday. Look tenders were generally "characters." The canal boatmen affected red shirts, were decidedly picturesque and not given to hurrying. Canal boat life was always hard but seldom lousy. Rum flowed nearly as freely along the banks as water did in the canal itself. There was much unprintable language used generally at Portland when the canal boat men mingled o' nights with the deep-water lads of the real ocean ships, there were ructions.

There was one thing about the business of the canal that surprised everyone. Before it was dug Portland people used firewood which was cut within fifteen miles of the city and hauled in by teams. When the canal was building, many who had been doing well hauling wood feared that, with the boats to transport it, the price would sink.

Just the opposite resulted, for when Portland people began getting their fuel from the canal boat men, the price immediately jumped to five dollars a cord. This firewood was cut in the winter months and hauled to Long and Sebago Lakes, where it was piled. When the canal began to run in the spring, they would go from landing to landing picking up this wood.

Some of the old-timers still chuckle at one of the old canal boat stories. A young man wanted to get to Sebago Lake but had no money to pay his fare on the canal boats. So he offered to work his way in return for free passage. The captain of the craft, who happened to be something of a wag, readily agreed. When the time for the start came, he assigned the young man to drive one of the horses along the towpath. So he worked his passage by walking twenty miles and driving a horse all the distance.

A Canal Boat to the Bahamas For twenty years the Cumberland and Oxford canal justified the hopes of its promoters. In 1850 the earnings took a decided slump. The newly built Atlantic & St. Lawrence Railroad, passing through several towns in Oxford County, diverted a lot of business. After that troubles piled upon troubles. Finally the Canal Bank took possession under its several mortgages. It struggled along until there came another staggering blow in the Portland & Orono Railroad, which, running by the foot of Sebago Lake to Portland, relieved the shippers of upper Cumberland country from paying further toll of the canal. After a long list of vicissitudes the canal gave up the ghost about 1870.

Viewed broadly, it was not a failure, rather was it the victim of circumstances. The railroad's cut it out of business. It may have failed to earn dividends and promoters and investors may have regretted the venture with more or less sadness, yet nobody can deny that it hastened the development of the Sebago Lake basin and the country it served.

There is a story that one of the canal boats sailed from Harrison, with lumber to Portland, proceeded from there under its own sail power to Boston, discharged its cargo and continued light to Turkey Islands in the Bahama Archipelago. There it loaded salt at Grand Turk and returned safely to Harrison. There's a canal boat trip for old deep-water, clipper-ships to contemplate!

Today the route of the old canal is getting pretty well obliterated, particularly after it branches away from the Presumpscot at Westbrook and becomes canal pure and unadulterated. Sometimes a little water trickles along its weed-choked bottom; sometimes a wanderer may come across the rotting relics, the "bones" of what was once a stout oak hull. Flat areas paralleling the ditches, remind the old-timer that here, faithful canal horses once plodded. Today, they are only charming places for a stroll.

Editorial Note.—Cannot some reader of the Norway Advertiser furnish us a story, with names and dates, of the canal boat which went from Harrison across the ocean and back, as told in the above article?

Also, we are surprised by Mr. Eldon's inference that the canal boat which sailed from the Baptist Church, in what is now Oxford, was where it is located! Such a church might have an historical item for the Norway Advertiser.

Do you Suffer from Colds?

Many of the internal medicines used for colds are altogether useless. Some are harmful, particularly the coal-tar products that irritate the heart action. Every cold is an infection. The direct way to check it is to kill the germs causing it.

When you neglect a series of colds the condition is likely to become chronic. Stop the infection by destroying the bacteria and you are through with the trouble. Why be miserable when you can be well?

B. & M.

EXTERNAL REMEDY

Radio And the "Mass Mind"

Vice-President Dawes, in his address at Salem, rightly called radio, "a great discovery," and was not far from the truth when he described it as eliminating "mob psychology" by eliminating the physical speaker. Much is said, indeed, by not seeing an orator's gesture or the flash of his eyes, and by missing, on the one hand the smile that goes with some quip intended to amuse, on the other the grave tense look which comes when serious points need appropriate facial enforcement. But there is also, where private receiving sets are used, the missing of the audience, and it is the audience which has been held to play a large part in manifestation of the "group mind" at public assemblies.

Dr. William McDougall has told us that for the psychological crowd to get in its work each person in an audience must be affected, not only by the orator, but also by "the mental processes of all around him"—a condition which is favored by some degree of similarity of mental make-up, interest and sentiment. "Consider," he says, "how under such circumstances a very ordinary joke or point made by a political orator provokes a huge delirium in an audience, a miration of an applauding audience, swells to a pitch of frantic enthusiasm; and how as it skillfully conducted and successful revival meeting the fervor of emotion is apt to rise until it exceeds all normal modes of expression, and men and women give way to loud weeping, or even hysterical convulsions." And it is the opinion of the Harvard psychologist that this tendency to slow down the citizen's sense of his individuality and his limitations is much more in evidence among our urban populations than among dwellers in the country districts.

But cannot an audience be self-contained and normal in the presence of a radio message? The Vice-President takes the affirmative view, and in support of it recalls the fact that there are cases in which a whole assembly can listen in without being moved to anything like "mob psychology." One instance he gives is that of the Democratic convention which did its business in a Madison square building at a time when still larger crowds stood outside in Union square listening in to the same addresses through the loud speaker. Inside, we are told, "the crowds rose to a fury in their cheers and demonstrations of approval and disapproval. Inside the mind was reached through the emotions, but outside the crowd listened amid a silence as of the grave. They listened as thinking individuals appealed to, if at all, through the mind."

In view of such experiences as these Vice-President Dawes has become a friend of radio, believes that we will slow down tendencies to "mob rule" by relieving our citizens from the influence of speakers—"blatherskites," he calls them—expert in arousing the emotions of crowds, and calls radio "one of the great safe-guards of American Government." Thus far we are not visibly nearing an era in which speeches, political addresses included, will be delivered exclusively by radio. Yet it should be possible to do something towards the elimination of the "mob mind" while preserving the conditions under which citizens now gather for public meetings. And the Vice-President's happiest suggestion to this end, suited to all sorts of addresses, is that the radio speaker should use common sense; have something to say and speak to the point.—Boston Herald

THE SPEED MANIA

The record of automobile fatalities in the crowded cities, as well as on the much traveled highways of the country is being daily increased through the carelessness of many drivers, professional and amateur.

All the safety sermons from press and pulpit seem to fall on deaf ears; most of the tragedies, due to thoughtless driving and senseless speeding, are either unheeded or make but a momentary impression, and the auto accidents continue to increase.

The Chicago Tribune, in an article on "Speed for Speed's Sake," well says: "A great deal of speed, we believe, has no consequential purpose. The ten to fifteen minutes which might be saved by a successful dash of speed, have no value to the driver; proportionate to the risks taken, or any which would at all compensate for an accident avoidable at reasonable speed. In a large part, the pace in the streets has been fixed not by the necessity of the drivers, but by their impatience. This is particularly true of private drivers. There probably is money in speed for cab drivers. Americans like brisk locomotion, whether it has purpose or not. It is a habit never to go leisurely if there is a chance of going rapidly. Speed is an object in itself. An American city is a place of nervous action. In automobile driving, the cost of this is out of proportion to the benefits which might result. The deaths are economical losses."

The "get-there" principle is all right if it is not put in practice at the expense of the safety and the rest of human lives. There should always be time to read and heed the danger signals everywhere.

For the occasion, as expected, Mutt and Jeff will be surrounded by a bevy of entrancing and pretty young women, a crowd of security and other original features. Their medium of gaiety and joy is a typical comedy with music in two acts and five periods supplying an entertainment calculated to please any audience out for a good time. The book of the new offering is by John P. Mulgrew, a writer of many stage successes, with melodies by Leo Edwards.
